

If changes to guidelines regarding telephone privacy must be enacted by the FCC, please allow Indiana's telephone privacy law to remain unhindered.

The Indiana law has been very affective in our household for two reasons. One, we are finally able to eat dinner, talk, and conduct family business without being interrupted every 15 minutes to a half hour by telephone rings. Two, we are no longer nervous about answering the telephone. Trying to be polite in the face of pressure to buy or sell something from a telemarketer is not easy. It is simply not a fair business practice.

Thank you for your time.
